OPACs should meet the information seeking needs of a wide range of end-user and intermediaries working on behalf of end-users

The end users generally do not know Dewey, but the librarians (intermediaries) do!

Where does that leave us?

Discovery systems

- The distinction between a Web-OPAC and a discovery system is getting increasingly blurred
- OPACs are traditionally restricted to library holdings only, whereas discovery systems may also include bibliographic data for items not held by the library
- In discovery systems metadata comes from various sources, many do not have classification codes or subject headings
- Does this indicate that searching for classification is relevant in OPACs but not in discovery systems?
- Let us look at some examples...

The screenshot shows the Axiell search help page for catalogue records. The page title is "Search parameters for catalogue records". It explains that parameters can be used with Boolean AND and OR, and that prefixes can be used for truncating. Examples are provided for subject, title, and author searches. A table lists various search parameters and their comments. The "classificationCode" parameter is highlighted with a red box.

Search parameters for catalogue records

The following parameters are available to search on when it comes to catalogue records. You can use Boolean AND and OR to combine several fields. You can type the prefixes in lower case, except when truncating.

To search using prefixes, enter the prefix followed by colon, for example:

subject:horses

or

title:happiness

or

author:"lama, dalai" - note that the search author:lama, dalai searches in free text for "lama".

Summary: I år skulle Sven Gillsäter ha fyllt 100 år. Med kamera runt halsen är en fascinerande fotobok som bygger på Svens dagböcker, reseskildringar, fotoböcker och reportage. Tonen är lättäm, eftertänksam, stundtals humoristisk - ungefär så som Sven själv var - och innehåller en stor mängd av Sven Gillsäter's fantastiska fotografier.

How to make Dewey work harder in discovery systems/OPACs

- Appreciate that subject searching is an important feature of the catalogue
- Appreciate that subject searching is complicated and the least fulfilling part when it comes to meeting the user needs
- Leave Dewey search as an option (preferably behind the scene from end users)
- Allow for combined searches (subjects + DDC)
- Give higher priority to subjects when ranking results
- Dewey as linked data

In mapped vocabularies:

- Consider search expansions to DDC when searching for a topic (Dewey behind the scene)
- Consider using the relationship types (=EQ, BM etc) for more relevant ranking

Thank you!
